Trapped in Paradise: Entangled Lives and Uncertain Futures in Tourist Towns

This workshop looks at small places whose position in a globalized world is predominantly mediated through tourism and migration. We are interested in places that have become desirable destinations for short- or long-term stays, leading to all types of uneven mobilities and appearing ever more like enclaves – on the one hand isolated and on the other connected to global networks. In short, we are interested in what it means to live and work in a place where others spend their holidays.

CONVENERS: Janine Dahinden (NCCR on the move/University of Neuchâtel), Annika Lems (Max Planck Institute for Social Anthropology Halle, Independent Research Group), Valerio Simoni (Graduate Institute Geneva), Sabine Strasser (University of Bern, Institute of Social Anthropology)

VENUE: Please note that all events will take place in Room 033, Main Building, Universität Bern, Hochschulstrasse 4, 3012 Bern
